WHY ARE DOG FOOD ADDITIVES SO IMPORTANT?

Good food for pets should contain more than just nutrients (proteins, fats, carbohydrates, minerals and vitamins). Functional additives (biologically active substances of plant origin) are also necessary, because they fulfil important pro-health functions. They support proper growth, development and functioning in animals of all ages.

PROTECTION OF TEETH

The triangle shape of the food kibble helps maintain dental hygiene with a structure that facilitates the abrasion of plaque.

FOS (FRUCTOOLIGOSACCHARIDES)

FOS is a feed additive that improves the consistency of faeces, reduces bloating and stimulates gastrointestinal bacteria to increase the production of nourishing ingredients for intestinal cells. Fructooligosaccharides are often referred to as prebiotics.

MOS (MANNANOLIGOSACCHARIDES)

The addition of MOS to animal feed increases the amount of local antibodies on intestinal surfaces. In this way, the digestive tract is better protected against potentially harmful bacteria.

BORAGE OIL

This ingredient supports the proper functioning of a dog's skin and coat. It is one of the substances that form a barrier protecting against dehydration and the ingress of allergens or harmful substances. Among all oils, this is the richest source of gamma-linolenic acid (GLA) and is one of the most important polyunsaturated fatty acids in the n-6 family.

DHA ACID

This aids proper development of nerve tissue and eyesight in puppies. The positive effect of DHA on a dog's learning ability has been scientifically proven. It has been shown to play an important role in the nervous system and ensures its efficiency even in old age. As an acid from the n-3 family it also has anti-inflammation properties.

SALMON OIL

This is one of the richest sources of omega 3 fatty acids. It has strong anti-inflammation properties.

ENTEROCOCCUS FAECIUM BACTERIA

E. faecium is one of the best known probiotic bacteria. Its addition to feeds for growing animals aids in the development of proper gastrointestinal flora. When the digestive tract of puppies is colonized by these bacteria the consistency of faeces is normalized, they are protected against bloating, digestion is normalized and nutrients are better absorbed in animals with digestive disorders.
